

A Letter My Teacher Sent Home

James i s	James was very disruptive in class today, he had a hard time concentrating on his work and had a difficult time sitting still in his seat.
trying he is love d .	He needs to keep trying with his reading as he is far below grade-level. He has not turned any of his assignments in on-time and is often asking for extensions. Maybe he needs a tutor. He loves when someone else reads the text aloud to him.
he is home in the classroom.	I'm beginning to think that his behavior may be stemming from the fact that he is homesick. I think it would benefit him greatly if his family checked in on him from time to time to make sure he had completed his homework and is staying attentive in classroom.
We see the value And progress	We need to see some major improvement with his work ethics. He needs to start taking his academics more seriously and see the value in the materials that are being taught to him. And if we do not see any progress with his work, we may need to hold him back in the remedial class for an additional year.
